

SHOP IS PROVIDED FOR NEW REPORT

That organization should be to organize the area of conflict and support organized cooperation between employers and employees. The organization would provide the joint action of managers and employees in dealing with their interests. It should endeavor to know men at least as intimately as they know materials, and to have a knowledge of the industry, its processes and policies. Employees need to understand their relation to the joint endeavor so that they may once more have a creative part in their work.

Closed Shop Not Necessary. The foregoing, together with the results of the plan proposed, not only permits shop committees and company unions, but leaves open the question of an open or closed shop to be settled in each factory on its own merits. Samuel Gompers, who announced the whole thing, is on record in a resolution adopted at its Atlantic City convention condemning shop unions and all other organizations not affiliated with or a part of the American Federation of Labor. But while Mr. Gompers must not take such an attitude in order to hold together the American Federation of Labor and to keep its own hold on it, the truth is that the plan proposed by the second industrial conference does not prevent every shop committee or or-

WHAT OPTOMETRY IS

It is the science of measuring the various errors of vision, and of supplying glasses for their correction. Optometry is steadily enlarging in scope, and its status is being more and more recognized by the public. Just here we desire to state that we strive to keep abreast of the advance in Optometry, and to give each patient the best that the science has to offer in theory and practice. We invite you on that basis.

sanitation in any plant from being afflicted with every other plant's organization and thus maintain an industrial or crafts organization. All the advantages of union labor are retained through the operations and power of the walking delegates are to some extent limited by the assistance that the troubles be settled at the bottom—in the individual plant itself—before outside assistance or counsel is brought in. But there is a recognition of the principle that workmen can be represented by persons of their own choosing—a principle which the employing group was unwilling in the first conference to recognize. Can't Compel Recognition. But unfortunately there is nowhere in the report any moral punishment outlined or practical means of compelling employers to recognize the spokesmen of the men, even though elaborate methods of choosing these spokesmen are indeed provided for in the secret ballot and impartial election machinery. There is nothing to prevent another Judge Gary from saying he will not deal with the spokesmen of the workmen. There is only, of course, the force of public opinion when once the facts are published. The difficulty is partly met by the establishment of regional boards of inquiry which call of their own volition call in representatives of the workmen and employers, just as the senate committee did, but even the report of a senate committee had relatively little effect in the steel strike. The hope, of course, is that as the plan is worked out, the country will get behind it, and the regional boards as well as the national industrial board will acquire as much prestige as the federal reserve board or perhaps the supreme court itself. There is the distinct advantage, incidentally, of leaving a good deal to the voluntary action of employers and employees, but with the new and vital provision for full publicity and investigation by impartial tribunals. The consensus of opinion in disinterested quarters here is that labor will have much to gain and very little to lose by accepting the industrial plan as a start in the right direction. It refuses to give the American Federation of Labor a monopoly. There seems to be no doubt on that point. But it makes every provision to give union labor a square deal.

Easter Modes

that express the gaiety and freshness of Springtime

Spring emerges from Winter like the butterfly from the chrysalis—a joyous, happy time, when youth and love of living show their influence in every fashion aspect. Many seasons have passed since there were such genuinely lovely things at Eastertide, each exquisite in its detail and relation to the other.

Beginning Thursday

"The Madonna in Art and Verse"
286 Pages of Picture and Poetry, Silk Bound, With Gold Edges

49c

This is a magnificently made book—published to sell for 3.00, and from a mechanical standpoint alone, worth far more than that now.

It contains 286 pages, reproducing all the famous paintings of the Madonna, as well as an anthology of poems on the Madonna and the paintings.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, this book will sell for only 49c a copy—a wonderfully appropriate Easter gift.

Cunning Frocks

With Little Hats to Match

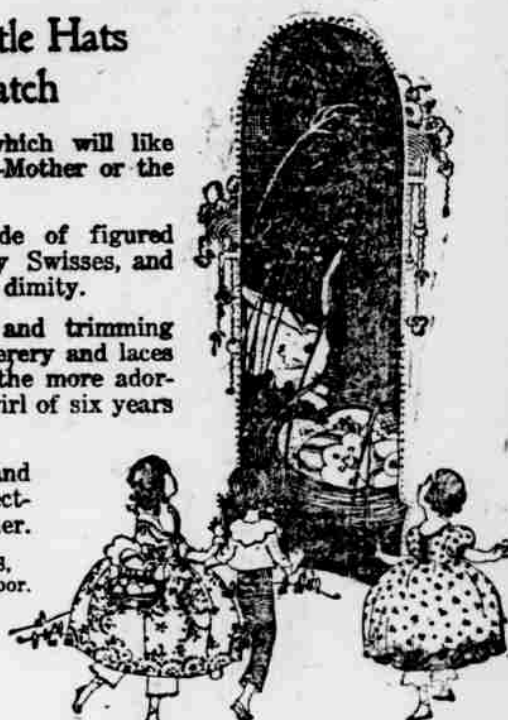

Hard to tell which will like them the most—Mother or the little girl.

They are made of figured lawns, and dainty Swisses, and here and there a dimity.

Dainty colors, and trimming of hand embroidery and laces makes them all the more adorable for a little girl of six years and less.

The dresses and hats match perfectly, and sell together.

Suits in Great Diversity for the Easter Promenade

Half the charm of this season's suits lies in the diversity of delightful modes. Bandings or huge pockets of embroidery decorate many suits of tricotine or Poiret twill.

Among the Finest:

A suit of navy blue flannel with chalk line stripes, is a semi-tailored model, a string belt aiding the link buttons in their purpose. Lined with fine figured silk. 115.00.

A navy tricotine boasts of three-tier pockets at each side, and basket weave braid trimming. There is a poudre vest of white novelty pique; the string belt crosses itself in front. 150.00.

The bloused jacket of another navy tricotine suit is set off with an elaborately braided vest of brown mahogany color, while the sash belt is unusual in its combination of tricotine and satin. The edges are piped with braid. 125.00.

At 39.75

The Easter Suit for 65.00

Suits include both serges and tricotines, the majority being in the always fashionable navy blue, and silk lined. There are plenty of styles, and sizes.

—PETERSEN'S, Third Floor.

It can be an exclusive model. It is an exclusive model when chosen from a particular group which includes many suits originally placed in higher priced assortments. Many of them are string belted suits of navy blue tricotine, developed along the conventionally tailored lines which are never eclipsed. Box coats and flare models are worthy examples of the newer styles. All are silk lined and finely tailored.

Coats—Suited to Cover Smart Frocks

Coats and frocks are an inseparable pair—one calls for the other. The influence of the English top coat is being evinced in Spring styles, a most desired type being the polo coat fashioned of genuine camel's hair cloth, belted or loose, with raglan or set in sleeves.

A most unusual style is a slipover coat of tan full-wool jersey trimmed with buff; it fastens with a double sash that can be tied and arranged with according to whim. 59.50. A coat of buff panti- nette has a large convertible collar and a string belt. 150.00.

A navy tricotine that features the much-to-be-desired Charlotte Corday collar has a panel of cord tucks down the back from collar to hem; the pockets are extended at the hips creating a bouffant effect.

Glistening Ribbons

Bright With Metal

It takes but little imagination to picture a new bag, or the vesting for the Spring apparel, from a piece of these wide ribbons. The colors are African brown, navy, and black, all embroidered in gold and silver threads and silk. 2.45 to 5.75 a yard. A gold and black embroidered ribbon, 11 1/4 inches wide, 11.75 a yard.

The Outing Club—Inside

Created by Petersen's

Nature made the first gift to the Outing Club—outdoors.

Architecture gave it the beautiful building, roomy and bright.

ART completed the task—Art under the guidance of The J. H. C. Petersen's Sons Company, which designed and equipped the Outing Club with all its draperies, rugs and furniture.

Photographs, in accurate colors, portraying the interior of the Outing club home, are now on display in our windows—together with suggestions for the draperies in the private home.
